

MONOLOGUES

This monologue is from a Stage Partners play, free to read in full at yourstagepartners.com.

Knock Knock by Jason Pizzarello and Kathryn Funkhouser

(LOGAN has been having a tough time on the job delivering packages lately, but one last difficult customer who refuses to accept their order might be the last straw.)

[SUIT: AtoZ Delivery promises one hundred and ten percent commitment to customer service. Is that what you think you're providing right now?]

LOGAN

You know what? I'm sorry, but the last few weeks I've been giving two hundred and ten percent. I got tipped with a toaster. I got signatures from a ghost and my ex. I stopped a robbery! Anybody sane would have walked off the job at any one of those doors. But I saw them all through. The company can say "one hundred and ten percent" as much as they want, but you know what? Maybe I'm the one who actually cares about these customers. Because I take pride in getting the job done, even when it's impossible. My friend called HQ when this lady wanted me to knit an entire sweater in one day, and you know what they told him? Figure it out if you want to keep your job. So I knit the sweater, but all the other customers had to wait. If this company really gave two cents about any customer, maybe they would listen to us. (A sigh.) So yeah, I'm providing customer service. I delivered every single package on my list today. Except the one you're holding. Please accept the package.

KNOCK KNOCK by Jason Pizzarello and Kathryn Funkhouser

Length: 30-45 minutes

Cast Size: 4-23 actors (suggested casting: 8 any)

Genre: Comedy

Synopsis: When you deliver packages, anyone might be behind your next door, from your elementary school teacher to a burglar on the job. Jaded veteran Logan has seen it all, while newbie Sam is convinced attitude is everything. The only sure thing in this job? They're both going to be surprised. Knock Knock is a rapid-fire comedy that delivers.